POLITICAL NOTES.

Index, 7th.

Hon. T. B. Rickey, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, says he will not run a ticket pledged to him, at the primaries in this county next Saturday. He will be satisfied with any delegation the people may elect, as he is willing to take his chances before a convention of Republicans. Furthermore, while he is an aspirant for the honor of the nomination yet he says that he will not make anything of a personal fight for it. If the majority think he is the man to lead the party in the hue of battle, he is willing to assume the responsibility and do his best to achieve victory. If, upon the other hand, the choice falls upon another, he will most heartily join with the rest of the party in electing him. Mr. Rickey's position is understood and appreciated by members of the Republican party, and its courteous frankness gains him friends wherever he goes.

The rumor was current yesterday that Hook Mason was in need of only six more delegates to make him sure of the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Coupled with this came the startling announcement that some of the Adams delegates were showing signs of weakening, and that with a united force of politicians against him Adams had a good chance to lose the fight at Elko after all. This would be a great surprise to the Adams wing of the party, but strange things happen. At any rate the Governor's opponents are exceedingly jubilant, while his friends are anxious and disturbed.

It is an open question whether the Democratic party of this State does not now contain more discordant material than ever before.

There was a joke floating around yesterday to the effect that Hook Mason was paying $400 for proxies to the Elko Convention. As this could not be traced to any reliable source, it was not generally credited. The general opinion is that votes have not yet reached that price, though there is no telling what figure they may run up to before Friday night.

Uneasy rests the head that wears a crown, and uneasy rests the head that wants to wear political preferment. There are a great many men in Nevada just now who neither sleep nor eat well, and their worry will not be over for several days. More than that some of them are likely to go broke on the proposition, and then it will be a question whether they eat or sleep at all.

The Maine Election.

AUGUSTA, (Maine) September 6th—The campaign is now in full blast. The Republicans are holding meetings all over the State, principally in the industrial and farming sections, where the tariff and prohibitory questions as outlined by Blaine, are being discussed. The presence of the plumed knight on the stump and the activity he is displaying is what is giving life to the contest. The opinion seems to be deeply rooted that the political battle on the part of the Republicans is the preliminary skirmishing of the national campaign of 1888. A horde of distinguished men in the State make no concealment of the fact that the fight for Bodwell is a continuance of the Blaine campaign of two years ago. Your correspondent was at the headquarters of the Republican State Committee to-day and had a brief talk with Chairman Manly, who is running the Bodwell campaign. The knowing ones in this city affirm that it was mainly at Blaine's instigation that Bodwell gave his consent to be a candidate as it was against his own inclinations. In referring to the outlook, he said everything presaged a glorious Republican victory. The vote for Bodwell would be about the same as that cast in 1882, when Robie was elected by 8,500 plurality. Bodwell's plurality would be as much, if not more. "We shall return our delegation to Congress," he added, by our usual large majority. Next Winter Senator Hale will be re-elected without any opposition in the party.

The Arizona Sentinel, published at Yuma under the management of George A. McCarter and J. W. Darrington, has been transformed into a Democratic organ by J. J. Stein, who controls the reins of management during the absence of the owners East. Considerable ferment and comment is caused by Stein's action.

THE COMSTOCK CAUCUS.

Parties Meet on the Inside.

The Carson Appeal says:

As far as the Appeal is able to learn the Comstock caucus on Friday last was called to order by John Mackay. He spoke of the necessity of party harmony and suggested the following programme:

That each candidate for the U. S. Senatorship put up a certain sum of money, as they might agree upon, and then allow each voter at the general election to write on his ticket the name of the person he preferred for U. S. Senator. The Republican candidate receiving the most number of votes would be considered the unanimous choice of the party.

Ex-Senator Stewart next spoke and said that this plan met his warm approval and that in accepting these conditions he would contribute $20,000.

Mr. Powning hearing of the plan said that when the time came his $20,000 would be ready.

Mr. Wren, of Eureka, has not been heard from as yet, and Mr. Daggett is yet undecided whether to jump in and take the same amount and run for Governor.

There was a good deal more business transacted at the meeting but it has not reached the outer world at the present writing.

Since the above was written it is rumored that Daggett had agreed to deposit $20,000 and that Mackay agrees to put up a large amount but the figures are not stated.

REPUBLICAN ARRANGEMENTS.

The Carson Tribune says:

So much has been said within the last few days concerning the bosses putting up political jobs in Virginia City, that with very much satisfaction the Tribune is enabled to state that what is called a square deal will be given the party this year. The arrangement made is that every candidate shall stand on his own merit; no pledges are to be exacted from the delegates to the State Convention, but such candidate goes thereto with whatever chances he may have for nomination. The money kings have determined to keep aloof from the fight and will only assist in the general election, setting aside every consideration but the election of the whole Republican ticket. The above statements can be relied on, as they come direct from the fountain head, and should be acceptable to all aspirants, and it is pleasing to know that for once delegates can go into convention untrammelled and free to cast their votes for the most acceptable men. This arrangement will also do away with the chronic howl about the sack, for not one dollar will be circulated for the purchase of votes in favor of this or that candidate in the coming Convention. There are at this time more candidates for Gubernatorial honors than for many years, and for that reason, if for no other, the arrangements made should be eminently satisfactory to all.

Ex-President Arthur's Condition.

A Boston special says: An old friend of ex-President Arthur, who has just returned from a visit to the distinguished invalid at New London, gives a gloomy view of Arthur's condition. He says the ex-President maintains at all times a forced cheerfulness, and still manifests the liveliest interest in current events and the leading political issues of the day, discussing men and measures with all his old-time keenness. Yet he soon tires; his breathing becomes short and enforced, and rest ensues. He has lost flesh until he is a mere shadow of his former self, and the robust physique and florid countenance are all gone. He feels the change bitterly, and expressions of sympathy are very cheering to him. These are constantly pouring in from all sections of the country. Arthur reads the newspapers with the greatest avidity. Any paragraph of a foreboding kind about himself makes him depressed and anxious. His attendants exercise continued care regarding the contents of the papers taken to him. There is no doubt that his illness is a confirmed attack of a dreadful malady, and that the inevitable result is only a question of time.

Jones and Fair Compared.

The Carson Free Lance says: Not long since a Washington correspondent compared Jones and Fair in Washington. A comparison of the two Senators at their houses would be still more striking. Jones returns a statesman, is met by half a dozen relatives, escorted to his home at Gold Hill in a special car, welcomed by his aged mother, wife and children, brothers and sisters, nieces and nephews, whose devoted friend and benefactor he is. A house full of twenty or more proud relatives await his return, fond of him for his many domestic virtues and proud of him for his National reputation as a statesman. His constituency, irrespective of party, point to him as the greatest leader in the nation, of the century.

Fair returns. A lackey possibly may meet him at Reno with a carriage to convey him to a hotel in the town which was once his home, or he is an unshored passenger on the railway train to Virginia. His former home on B street is deserted, or, possibly, guarded by a lone watchman; his wife, for causes too well known, is divorced from him, his children alienated from him and out from his influences; not a near relative, not a true friend in all Nevada to grasp him by the hand to welcome him home. Even Dick Dey has gone over to Mackay, Fair's arch-enemy. Honorless, friendless, the Senator—not Statesman—returns. His family has deserted him, his corruption of Nevada politics has damned him, his public career is a conspicuous disgrace to himself and the State he misrepresents. In the interest of the good name of the Battle-born State, and for the sake of the self-respect of an intelligent people give us for the next six years a worthy companion to Jones in the United States Senate.

THE MOUNT COREY MINE.

Work to be Actively Resumed Upon a Once Famous Property.

The Virginia Chronicle says:

It seems to be a settled fact that work will be resumed at the Mount Corey mine in Esmeralda county. A few years ago it attracted considerable attention and was looked upon by experienced miners as a very promising property. Even John W. Mackay said it was a good thing and backed up his faith by putting considerable money into the work of opening it up. Alex. McKenzie, of the Sierra Nevada, was sent over as superintendent, and died there, which seemed to give black eye to everything connected with it.

An immense mill adapted to a tedious leaching process was built and many big bars of bullion were produced. Things went on swimmingly for a time and all was serene at Coryville, which assumed the proportions of a sprightly mining camp. Buildings were removed from Bodie and Aurora, and the little place soon became the objective point of the regular crowd of shiftless adventurers who swarm toward "new diggings."

But a change came. The ore didn't hold out, bullion shipments stopped and the leading mines of the camp shut down, much to the discomfiture and pecuniary embarrassment of a large number of persons who located there in full faith that a big bonanza was assured. The owners of the Mount Corey, however, never lost faith. For some months past the owners have had a small force of men working the mine, and the outlook induces them to resume operations in a comprehensive manner.

This morning R. M. Ballard, Superintendent, with Daniel McSherry and Nick Freeman left for Hawthorne, and will go to work on the Corey in real earnest. A shaft will be sunk and the ground thoroughly prospected to a depth sufficient to prove the value of the mine. The owners have abundant means to carry on the work and will not succumb to any frivolous obstacle.

BISHOP WHITAKER.—In the last issue of Frank Leslie's appears the annexed sketch of Bishop Whitaker.

Os: William Whitaker, the new Assistant Bishop of Pennsylvania, was born in New Salem, Mass., May 10th, 1836. He graduated from Middlebury College, Vermont, in 1856, and for four years was principal of the High School in North Brookfield, Mass. He then (1860) entered the General Theological Seminary, New York, and graduated three years later. He was ordained in Deacon's Orders July 15th, 1863, in Grace Church, Boston, by the Right Rev. Manton Eastburn, D. D., and to Priest's Orders in St. Stephen's Church, Boston, by the same prelate, August 7th. In September following (1863) he went West and became rector of St. John's Church, Gold Hill, Nev. He continued his ministrations in that parish for two years, during which time the present St. John's Church was erected. In 1865 he returned to the East, where he remained in active work for nearly two years. Then receiving a call to the rectorship of St. Paul's Church, Virginia City, Nev., he accepted it, and for nineteen years he has been identified with the religious and other enterprises of that growing city.

At the meeting of the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States, held in St. John's Chapel, New York, in 1868, he was unanimously elected by both Houses of the Convention, Missionary Bishop of Nevada. He accepted the office in 1869, and was consecrated in St. George's Church, New York city, October 13th, 1869. Since that time Bishop Whitaker has been an untiring worker for the best interests of Nevada, spiritual, moral and intellectual. No part of the field has been neglected; even distant Arizona, which for a time was part of his jurisdiction, had been regularly visited, and the welfare of the Church forwarded in every possible way. In the State of Nevada alone he has been directly instrumental in establishing under adverse circumstances, too—as many as twelve churches, all of which are now in prosperous condition, and have good church buildings. In addition to these labors, the good Bishop founded a young ladies' seminary in Reno, which is a fine illustration of his business foresight, the seminary being one of the most successful institutions of the kind ever started in the Far West. In other matters the Bishop has shown his thorough business sense and astuteness. Another feature of his character is his personal magnetism; to know him is to grow into a constantly increasing respect and affection for him. The ministers under his charge work with him and each other with a singleness of purpose and unity which binds the Episcopal Church in Nevada together in an almost apostolic simplicity. Bishop Whitaker is with a man of strong convictions, and in every sense a public-spirited citizen and thorough patriot.

A Washington dispatch of Monday says: Hugh J. Mohan, of California, who was recently appointed Special Agent of the Labor Bureau, has resigned, in order to take the stump for the Democratic party in the coming campaign in California and Nevada.

CONCENTRATIONS.—The Virginia Chronicle says:

During the past month a number of stamps at the California mill have been run on Con. Virginia ore, crushing it for several concentrators that have taken the pulverized rock directly from the battery, the purpose being to reduce many tons of ore to a small quantity which may be worked closely up to the assay value of the ore in pass. The stamps crushed an average of more than three tons per day each, and the result has been a large quantity of concentrations. Yesterday the work of crushing ore was suspended, and to-day the pans were started upon the concentrators to complete the experiment; that is, to demonstrate whether it is profitable to work low-grade ore. If it is a success, the "good time coming," which is so often alluded to, may be somewhat hastened.

SINGULAR ACCIDENT.—Early Monday morning, as the transfer steamer Solano was about to enter the slip at Port Costa, engine 89 and car attached to it ran off the bow of the steamer and plunged into the bay. As the car ran off into the water it settled back with a crash against the rudder of a double-ended steamer and broke it. The conductor, engineer and brakeman saved their lives by jumping from the rear platform of the car, as it was in the air, on to the boat. Henry Garvey, the fireman, was drowned. The damage done to the Solano will necessitate her being laid up for repairs. The engine was valued at about $8,000. An effort will be made to raise her as soon as possible.

AT THE ASYLUM.

WILL BE HELD ON THE SATURDAY NIGHT DANCES.

There are yet a few people in the woods who think that all insane persons are wild animals, without the least semblance of humanity, and that they are necessarily dangerous. This idea could not be dispelled more thoroughly than by a visit to the Nevada State Insane Asylum some Saturday night during the time that a dance is going on. The recreation room is crowded with patients, male and female, and with the exception that the people are unusually quiet and well-behaved, the visitor would readily believe that he was witnessing an ordinary evening party. But little conversation is indulged in, and that is confined almost exclusively to visitors, or sometimes between patients and visitors. "Take your partners for a quadrille," calls the floor manager, and there is the usual bustle and stir, and a rush for the favorite dances. Visiting ladies readily dance with the male patients, but the female patients usually have to accept partners from the list of male patients, or be content to remain wall-flowers. This is but another illustration of the superior sympathetic nature of the women. It takes but a few moments to form the sets. If the men do not choose partners for themselves the attendants do that service for them. The music starts up, and the prompter says, "Honors all." The spectator on the music-stand looks over the assembly to note the effect of the music upon the warped but sensitive minds before him. The effect is electrical. A moment before these people were standing listlessly by, their faces unrelieved by a gleam of intelligence. Now they seem transformed by a sudden joy, and there is such bowing and scraping as would do credit to a French dancing-master. There is no ribaldry, however. Everything is carried through with dignity and decorum. "First four right and left," calls the prompter, and the order is quickly obeyed with great precision and exactness. "Ladies chain," and the music increases in volume. "Balance on the corners." Ah, that is the supreme moment. See that man in the gray suit, with carefully trimmed beard. He cuts the pigeon wing as neatly as ever did old Sir Roger de Coverly. "Swing your partner to place." And thus the dance goes on. It is heart-warming to watch these unfortunate people enjoying a brief respite from mental tedium, under the magical touch of music accompanied by the exhilarating influence of rhythmic exertion. The patients look forward to these dances with pleasurable anticipations, equal to those experienced by the school-boy contemplating the joys he is to have in the first days of his summer vacation.

A BURNING SHAME.—The Carson Appeal lies as follows:

A Reno woman, while walking along the street recently, suddenly became aware that her clothes were burning. She immediately turned her back towards a large show window, and deftly made a grab for the smoke, which came from the direction of her bustle. First she brought out a purse, and then came a small package of dry goods, a box of candy, a pair of baby socks, a novel, half a dozen papers of pins, a pamphlet on dress reform, and last of all the flaming and incinerated remains of the Weekly Journal that had been doing duty as a bustle. By this time quite a crowd had gathered and helped stamp out the fire on the sidewalk. But meantime the fire had caught the embroidered garments and she was in danger of being very severely burned. However, a pitcher of ice water thrown by Bob Fulton subdued the conflagration, and the lady more mortified than injured, replenished her wardrobe from a neighboring store. Powning's candidacy for the Senate will not be affected by this incident.

The Lassen Democrats have nominated the following candidates: Dennis Wood, Sheriff; W. T. Master (third term), Clerk; John T. Long, Assessor; John Baker, District Attorney; D. C. Hyer (third term), Treasurer; Miss Myra Parks, Superintendent Schools; Lyon Sander, Coroner.

It is to be feared that the bitter feeling engendered between the friends of the opposing Democratic candidates for the nomination for the Judgeship in this end of the State will have a bad effect on election day. Personal warfare has run altogether too high to insure harmony after the nomination is made.

The selection was made with the view particularly of providing reading matter suitable for the younger children, and added to the books already in the library, the whole makes a collection of which all connected with the school may justly be proud, and one from which may be drawn instruction and entertainment by all who have the privilege of selecting from its treasures.
